It checks all my emails, I don't need to open many webmail windows, it just sits in my tray and checks mail. I have just received a message from the advertising partner and this tool reported it as a top priority message. I already love it!

I played with EmailTray last weekend, and must admit this program is definitely a way to go, because it does just the things I need but no other program does: only one click is required to receive email from all of my webmail accounts, it's one notifier for all of my webmail accounts, and there's one list with all emails I really want to see - also from all of my webmail accounts.

In my opinion it's more of an email client with a notifier added, and from my point of view it's more than I want.

I used ePrompter for several years but that program couldn't keep up with the operating systems. Emailtray is fantastic and is easy to setup for all types of email. "Two Thumbs Up"

At our motel, we receive online bookings to our email account, but with not so important email. We needed a notifier that was priority specific. This seems to be about the only one out there that does this. Using filters, we specify which emails are high priority and set the audible notification to tell us there are high priority emails waiting for us. It is a very pleasant voice that sounds off every couple of minutes or so until we deal with the email. The free version does almost everything the purchased version does, but I paid for the full version just to let me ad my own signature, and because it just seems fair. Any email to support comes back very quickly with help, I think by the creator himself.
